Our representative in the Constitutional Convention has been heard from in advocacy of a resolution before the Legislative Committee, "whether it should be recommended that the Legislature be given the power to enact a law to allow damages to be recovered for the damage ages to be recovered for the damage done to property by reason of the prosecution of works of internal imprevement, whether there be physical damage done or not. In other words, if a railroad which runs through the land of a farmer, who receives payment for the damage wrought, at the same time does damage to the land of a farmer whose land is not touched by the line." Actual trespass may not be committed but the most of the people of the State will agree with Mr. Wescott that if a man's property is damaged by a work of public improvement he should be paid for it.

Nor is it a surprise to anyone, as noted in the Richmond Dispatch, that his speech was an able one and showed that he was an able debator, and it is safe to predict that he will be heard from again on measures looking to the interests of his constituents as well as to the people of the State generally.

Rights committee, to whom this question was referred by the convention, have agreed to report in favor of eliminating the word. It will, however, when it comes before the body Friday, provoke the liveliest discussion yet witnessed. Senator Daniel, ex-Governor Cameron and some of the most brilliant leaders in the convention are opposed to this proposition. These gentlemen insist that the Mason Bill of Rights shall remain as it has stood for centuries.

They know now that the proposition to strike out the word "Christian" from the Bill of Rights is too repugnant to the sentiment of the great body of the people of Virginia to be entertained by them for a moment, and yet more valuable time is to be taken up and more money spent in its consideration. There is comfort in the thought though, that their decisions on these and most other questions are likely to be right, and whatever their oratory may cost the Commonwealth, it may, be that they will be able to convince their constituents "that all is well that ends well."

Major Daniel's suffrage plan, which re the Convention met was expected to meet all the objections of members from the various sections of the State and not to be in conflict with the provisions of the Federal Constitution has not yet been submitted to the Committee, which will stamp it with their approval before it will be presented to the Convention for discussion. The end according to the latest advices is not even in eight and the report not very en couraging as to the time it will be or that the plan when submitted will have the endorsement of the members themselves or their constituents. Despite the difficulties and embarrasments though with which Major Daniel and his committee are confronted daily, which were not snticipated by them, we cannot but hope for a wise solution of this in tricate and perplexing question by them, and though everything is being held in obeyance until that report is made, we can afford to wait with patience if through it we get relief from the evils that now exist, which we have the right to expect from the men of exalted ability that make up the committee.

"Every county and city committee in the State will have to be reorganized at the time of the nomination of eandidates for the House of Delegates," says Hon. J. Taylor Ellyson, chairman of the Democratic Committee. His decision is in accordance with the plan adopted in the State Convention at Norfolk last year and removes all doubts which, seemed to follows: prevail to the contrary in some of the countles of the State. A meeting for the purpose of reorganization, already agreed upon in Accomac, will be held at the August term of the County Court.

Richmond, July 17.—The Constitu-tional Convention did little or noth-ing to-day, and there was a still fur-ther falling off in the number of resolutions introduced. the races according to the taxes paid by each were the subjects before the committee.

A striking feature in the meeting of the committee on education was the speech of Judge Quarles in favor of the election of school superintendents and all State officers by the people.

"Until schools," he said, "are taken from under the control of political bosses or corporations good results will be impossible."

Of probably more interest was the question of dividing the school fund, which was brought up by Mr. Turnbull, of Brunswick, its author.

Mr. Turnbull declared that his proposition is not based upon any prejudice against the negro or any desire to retard the progress of the race.
